

Health, Aging & End of Life

Salud, Envejecimiento y Final de Vida

International Journal of Research

Revista Internacional de Investigación

Health, Aging and End of Life has been conceived as a general interest international research journal, and it is specifically aimed at health professionals conducting their jobs in any care setting. It is also opened to professionals from other disciplines, who can contribute through their work with reflections on the aging process and end of life.

The journal seeks to disseminate knowledge and good practices, regarding the care of people in these stages of life in order to improve the quality of their care. Due to the interdisciplinary interest, special consideration shall be given to works carried out jointly by professionals from different fields and which provide an overall vision of any of the journal's topics of interest. The journal also has an international vocation, and articles in Spanish and English shall be published indistinctly.

PUBLICATION GUIDELINES

GENERAL GUIDELINES FOR SUBMITTING ORIGINALS

All contributions shall be assessed prior to acceptance and reviewed externally and anonymously through a peer review process.

Contributions shall be original and must not be simultaneously submitted to another journal. However, the Editorial Board will assess the option of publishing works of specific interest that have been previously published partially or in another language.

All authors, prior to submitting the manuscripts, must have read the final version and approved the final manuscript.

MANUSCRIPT PREPARATION

Manuscripts in Spanish or English shall be accepted. They shall be submitted in Word format, double-spaced, with numbers on the upper right-hand side of the page and with 3-cm margins.

Cover letter. A description of the work's contribution to the field of knowledge and its relevance must be included, along with the section the manuscript is intended for, the work title, authors' names and surnames, affiliation, contact addresses, word counts for the abstract and the text (not including abstract, bibliography, tables or figures).

First page. To protect anonymity, only the title of the work, and not the authors' names, shall appear on the first page. Authors must also ensure that the rest of the manuscript does not include references, names or dates that may identify the work. However, if these data are considered necessary, they may be published after the final manuscript is accepted for publication.

Abstract. An abstract shall be included in Spanish and English, not exceeding 300 words.

Keywords. 3 to 5 keywords in Spanish and English must be included.

Length. The structure and length shall depend on the section the work is intended for: Originals and special articles, 5,000 words maximum; brief originals, 3,000 words maximum; reviews or clinical cases, 2,000 words maximum; letters to the editor or book reviews, 1,000 words maximum.

Figures and tables. The end of the manuscript shall include – each on a separate page – the figures and tables, numbered, and indicating, in the text, where they will be placed. Each table and figure must have a heading to explain the content.

Bibliography. The bibliographical references shall be featured at the end of the manuscript and shall be adapted to the American Psychological Association (APA) standards.
